Amelia Justice

"My name is Amelia Justice, and I've been in the jewelry business at Justice Jewelers all my life. It was my first job as a kid. As soon as I could reach the countertops, I was wrapping presents and being a Santa's helper passing out cookies.

It was all about work ethic. My father, Woody Justice, did appraisals and sold gemstones out of a suitcase and it's now the largest jewelry superstore in Missouri that you see today. We're affiliated with JBT, Jewelers of America, Preferred Jewelers International and we train our staff in GIA and DCA training.

Justice Jewelers was founded in 1982 and we wanted to celebrate our 35th anniversary in a really big way. We wanted to celebrate our 35 years in the community, get rid of some aged inventory, and just have a big, big sale.

My father had used Wilkerson many years ago while closing a store in Arkansas. Also, the Wilkerson reputation in the jewelry industry speaks for itself. However, I was extremely reluctant about doing the kind of marketing and advertising Wilkerson specializes in. Although, I have to admit, Phil was immediately like one of the staff and came in 7 days a week, working hard with us. Many of the staff members have told me they wish he could stay.

The sale with Wilkerson really helped with our financial goal. We overdid our target and it was amazing. I would recommend Wilkerson to any jewelry store owner. The sale was extremely helpful in getting rid of aged inventory and reaching our financial goal. Two months flew by!"
