“With the Wilkerson organization, they really bring so much to the table. I can’t say enough for the sales consultants. Priority number one was the sale of our inventory, first and foremost.”

“My name is Jerrold Mack. I’m President and one of the principal owners of Mack & Sons Jewelers in St. George, Utah. We were very familiar with the Wilkerson program. We’ve known them for thirty-four years and there was no question in our mind who we would use to close this last store for my own retirement.

We have eleven days to go until the end of our sale and we’re very close to reaching our second stretch goal. We’ve cleared out almost all of our own original inventory at a good measure of profitability. We should have little trouble reaching our second stretch goal.

With the Wilkerson organization, they really bring so much to the table. I can’t say enough for the sales consultants. Priority number one was the sale of our inventory, first and foremost. It really takes a load off of an owner. If there is an owner out there who thinks they have the ability to do this type of promotion themselves, I think they’re fooling themselves. There is a lot more involved for a successful sale.

In the length of time that we’ve known Wilkerson, in particular Bobby and Rick Hayes, the overriding factor that I’ve come to realize, is that this is an organization that is as interested in their clients’ financial success, probably even more so than they are in their own financial success.”
